

PADI eLearning Courses or On-Line Learning

Many PADI Scuba Diving Courses are now available on-line in terms of the academic part of a particular course. This basically means that you can learn the theory part of your course in the comfort of your own home at your own leisure/pace. The package comes with an electronic version of the manual, quizzes and knowledge reviews and you will have access to these for your future reference, should you so wish. You will be required to complete these quizzes and Knowledge Reviews as you progress through the on-line course towards the Final Exam, which too can be done on-line. This information will be available to the Instructor/Dive Centre that you choose to complete the practical elements. This theory may be completed locally to where you live, together with the Confined Water element or you can do what many prospective divers do and that is to come to the warm crystal clear waters around Gozo and complete both the Confined Water and the Open Water elements or just the Open Water elements by means of the referral process to Utina Diving College Ltd in Xlendi on Gozo. Confined Water is the part where you learn and practise the various skills necessary to be a scuba diver and the Open Water part is where you demonstrate 'Mastery' of those skills.

The on-line learning may be completed on a laptop or a tablet and you will be supplied with simple straight forward instructions to take you through the process. The fees for the online learning part of the course are payable directly to PADI and are separate to the fees payable to the dive centre/instructor who takes you through the remaining part of the course(es). If you split your training between Confined Water/Theory and the Open Water elements, then you will require a Referral Document from the centre that carried out that Confined Water Education. They will provide you with this document and bring it to us when arrive in Gozo. The link below will take you to the PADI website where you can learn more about the costs of the various eLearning packs.
